Some important information about your nomination

If you have more than one account and want to make different nominations for each account, please complete separate Beneficiary forms for each account.

The nomination you make in the table on the following page, will override any previous nominations you've made only on the accounts listed in Section 1 of this form.

For reversionary nominations the pensioner relationship indicated in the table below will need to exist at the time of your death to be valid. Any valid reversionary pensioner nomination will override a binding death benefit nomination. If you're nominating a child as the beneficiary of a Reversionary pension, the child must be under the age of 18, or between 18 and 25 and financially dependent upon you, or disabled at the time of your death to receive a reversionary pension. If the child is not disabled the pension must be taken as a lump sum at age 25.

Information on nominating a beneficiary

Types of nominations

A non-lapsing binding nomination which is binding on the Trustee.

Selecting this nomination will make sure your benefit is paid as you have directed as long as the nomination is and remains valid. This nomination stands even when your personal circumstances change such as getting married, having children, or any other life-changing event occurs. It is therefore, very important to regularly review your nomination to make sure it reflects your current personal circumstances.

A non-binding nomination subject to Trustee discretion.

The Trustee will decide who receives your benefit, taking into consideration your preferred beneficiaries and your current circumstances at the date of your death.

No nomination.

The Trustee will decide who receives your benefit.

A reversionary nomination.

You can elect to have your pension payments continue to a nominated beneficiary upon your death.

If you have a transition to retirement pension, your beneficiary must, at the time of your death, satisfy at least one of the legally prescribed conditions of release to be eligible to receive a reversionary pension. The conditions of release are reaching age 65, reaching preservation age and becoming fully retired, permanent disablement or terminal illness. If your nominated beneficiary does not, at the time of your death, meet one of these conditions of release, they can elect to receive the death benefit in the form of an account based pension or a lump sum payment. If your reversionary beneficiary does not choose one of these two forms of payment within 30 days of your death benefit will be paid to your reversionary beneficiary as a lump sum.

Who can receive my super upon my death?

Under superannuation law, the Trustee is only permitted to pay your super benefit to:

Individuals

- your spouse or de-facto spouse, including same sex partners
- children including step and adopted children, children of your spouse and other children within the meaning of the Family Law Act 1975
- individuals who are financially dependent on you at the time of your death
- someone in an interdependency relationship with you at the time of your death

Legal personal representative (your estate)

Your legal personal representative either the executor under your will or a person granted letters of administration for your estate if you die without having left a valid will.

A super death benefit may only be paid to your beneficiary as a pension (or reversionary pension) if they are financially dependent on you at the time of your death. If your children become entitled to super upon your death, they must be less than 18 years of age or less than 25 years of age and financially dependent on you, or have a disability (of the kind described in subsection 8(1) of the Disability Services Act 1986) to be eligible to receive a pension, otherwise your super must be paid to them as a lump sum.

You should regularly review your nomination, especially when your circumstances change (eg marriage, divorce, birth of a child or any other significant life event), to ensure your nomination remains up to date. If your beneficiary nomination is not valid at the time of your death, the Trustee will decide who receives your account balance.

Why can't you nominate other family members or friends?

The law only allows you to nominate individuals who are financially dependent on you or have an interdependency relationship with you at the time of your death. However, you can choose to have your benefit paid to your estate where you can nominate your friends and/or other family members in your will to receive these funds.

What is a financial dependant?

Someone who is financially dependent upon you at the time of your death.

The definition of a dependant under superannuation legislation may be different to the definition which is used for Tax purposes. For more information on estate planning we recommend you speak with your financial or legal adviser.

What is an interdependent relationship?

This is a close personal relationship between two people who live together, where one or both of them provide for the financial and domestic support and personal care of the other. This type of relationship may still exist if there is a close personal relationship but the other requirements aren't satisfied because of some physical, intellectual or psychiatric disability.

Where can you check your beneficiary nomination?

Your beneficiary nomination details will be confirmed each year in your Annual Statement and can be viewed online at any time on mlc.com.au

Taxation

The taxation rules relating to death benefits are complex and different taxation treatments may apply depending on the beneficiary nomination in place. Please seek advice from your tax adviser.

MLC MasterKey Investment Protection

Your spouse can only be nominated as your beneficiary for MLC MasterKey Investment Protection as an additional benefit at the time you apply for MLC MasterKey Investment Protection.
