How to track total super balance

24 March 2022

Your total super balance impacts how much you can contribute to super. Here's the key things you need to know about your total super balance and how to track it.

What is 'total super balance'?

Generally, your total super balance (TSB) is the sum of all amounts you have in the superannuation system (certain exceptions apply*). At a high level, it includes:

- your accumulation account balances
- your superannuation pension accounts, and
- the outstanding balance of a Limited Recourse Borrowing Arrangement (if you have a self-managed super fund which has borrowed to invest), in certain circumstances.

TSB is used as part of the eligibility criteria for certain types of super contributions.

* Exceptions and modifications may apply, for example if you've made a personal injury contribution to super. Calculating TSB can be complex, so it is important to seek advice.

When is it measured?

Your TSB for a financial year is measured on the previous 30 June when determining your eligibility to make or receive certain types of super contributions.

How does TSB impact contributions?

Eligibility rules apply to the different types of contributions that can be made to super. Some contributions require that your TSB is below certain thresholds (usually generally based on your TSB at the previous 30 June). For this reason, it is important that you carefully check your TSB before making contributions to super. Also, your financial adviser might need to know details of your TSB to ensure that any recommendations to contribute to super are within your contribution caps[^].

[^] The contribution caps limit the amount that can be contributed to super. The amount you can individually contribute (or have made on your behalf) depends on a number of issues including your TSB. Exceeding your contribution cap may result in additional tax or penalties. Visit the ATO website for more information.

How to check your TSB

There are a few ways you can track your TSB.

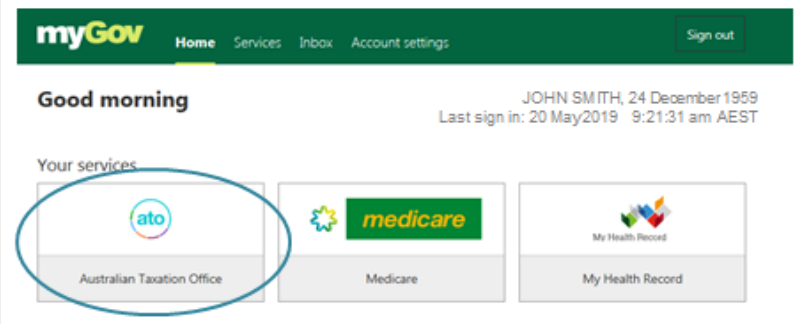

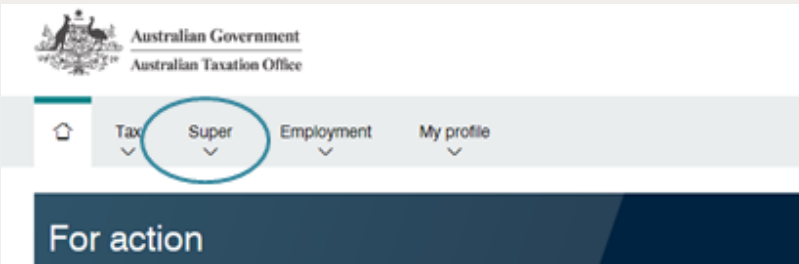

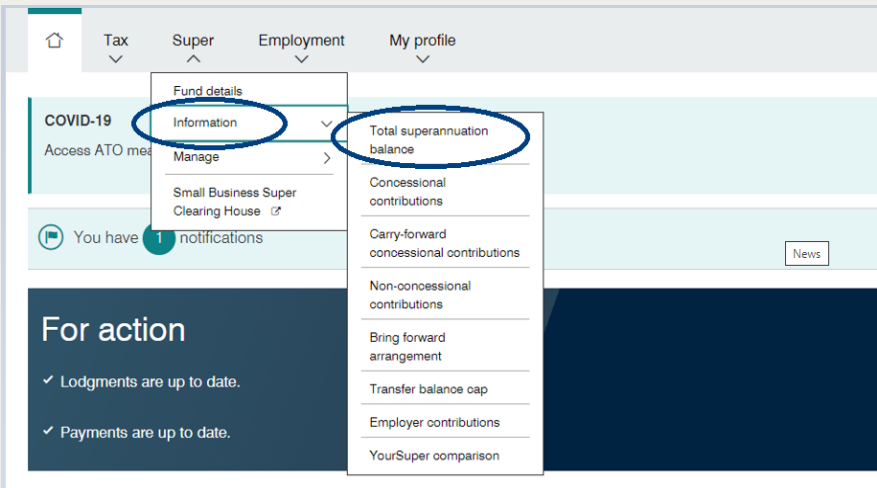

A useful source of information is your MyGov account which is explained below. Other options are contacting your superannuation funds or looking at your fund's statements and records. When reviewing your annual statement, the TSB figure your fund reports to the ATO is usually referred to as 'exit value' or 'withdrawal benefit'. This may be different to the 30 June 'closing balance'.

Your total superannuation balance is used to determine your eligibility to make contributions, receive co-contributions, and your spouse's eligibility to claim a tax offset for spouse contributions. For self-managed, or small APRA funds, the trustee will also use all members' total superannuation balances to determine whether the segregated assets method can be used to calculate exempt pension income.

Remember that your TSB reflects your accounts as at the prior 30 June. Before you rely on the information in MyGov, it is important that you:

- check that all of the super and pension accounts that you held on 30 June are displayed
- reconcile the amounts displayed with the 'exit' or 'withdrawal' value displayed on your end of year statements and other records, and
- contact your super fund and the ATO if the information doesn't look correct, before making super contributions.

Speak with your financial adviser, or visit the ATO website, for more information.
